World's lightest material is made out of nickel

Posted Monday, November 21st, 2011

Michael Allan McCrae | November 20, 2011 Print Article Scientists claim to have made the world's lightest material—so light it can float on top of dandeloin fluff—and they made it out of nickel. The metal used matters less than the structure. The material, developed by researchers at HRL Laboratories, LLC, is made out of micro-lattices [...]"
